Mr. PRINTER.

The following receipt for the Gout is exactly transcribed from a very antient Dutch Author, which I wish to be published in your paper, for the benefit of such as are subject to that honourable Malady.

For the GOUT

TAKE an ould Fat Goose, prepare her as if you would roast her: Then take a Kitline or young cat, flea it, cast away the head and entrails thereof, and coatund the flesh thereof in a Mortar, add as then thereto fat bakone One ounce, three quarters of an Ounce of Wax; as much white Rosine, and whyte Frankinsence; beat all these together, and replenish there with the Goose: broach her, and sow her fast to the spit least any thing fall thereout; roast her, and receive the droppings thereof in a dripping pan: when as now the Goose is dressed and roasted that she droppeth no more, throw her as then away, least any body eat thereof.

And this Salve of Uncione cureth the Gout,
Doctor RARE
