The Chinese radish (rasphanus sinensis) is preferable to any kind known, not only for culinary purposes, and giving light but also in Medicine From the experiments made lately by Dr. Francis de [Heric--], it is extremely useful in Rhumatic & pulmonary affections, and has [been] employed with much success in convulsive coughs -- it is not liable to {...} spoil by keeping like other oils _ the plant is not injured by the strongest frosts _ in May & June the Seed is gathered which is very abundant _
